

Mother and Year Old Baby Escape Death In Bad Fall

PLUNGE DOWN STAIRS AT HOME WITH MINOR INJURY

Gas Sends Man From Work To The Hospital

Boy's Arm Fractured While Skating

Mrs. William Hamlin and son, Billy, escaped serious injury, if not death, yesterday afternoon when they fell down stairs.

Mrs. Hamlin, who resides on Fayette street, heard her child call and went up stairs for him. She picked him up and as she started down the stairs tripped and fell the full length of the stairs with the baby in her arms.

When they landed at the bottom, the baby was injured under the mother.

The baby is but one year old and had just finished his nap a few minutes before the accident occurred.

The only injuries sustained by the child was a cut lip and minor bruises while Mrs. Hamlin escaped with shoulder bruises. They were taken to the office of Dr. Harold Collins.

Robert Karge was brought to the hospital Monday, suffering a fractured arm which he received when he fell while skating. He was discharged yesterday morning.

Henry Lane was brought to the hospital last Friday, suffering from gas inhalation while at work in Hillton. He was discharged Sunday.

Milady's Mirror

By Suzanne Verne
(Copyright, 1934, M. E. Gordon)

Prune and groom the brows! Brush and comb the lashes! Simple recipes—but ones that will do "that something" to give milady's eyes charm.

Every woman craves long, sweeping, luxurious lashes. It's all a matter of training, after all. Almost everyone can cultivate a generous crop of them, if they will but take the time and pains.

Actresses usually have thick, curling lashes as a matter of course, and the theory has been advanced, quite logically too, that it is the constant taking off and applying of eye makeup which has brought about the luxuriant growth. It isn't the mascara that does it. It's the exercise that each little-lash gets from the incessant brushing on of the mascara.

Apply this same principle at home and see what happens. Invest in a little eyebrow brush, give the lashes a vigorous brushing three or four times a day. This, done with an upward stroke on the upper lashes, will tend to turn them up beguilingly.

If the lashes are stiff and brittle, brush uncolored vasoline on them as you carry them, to make them soft and silky.

If they are sparse and scraggly, nourish them by rubbing into the roots, every night, a bit of eyelash grower. Plain, uncolored, vasoline is good for this, or Castor or olive oil. Use just a little, and be sure that none gets into the eyes, as greases will prove irritating.

If you use mascara, comb the lashes with a fine comb, while the mascara is still slightly damp. This will make them seem more natural. Brush the tips of the lashes carefully, bending them upwards in the process. If your eyes are long and narrow and the lashes longer at the outer edges, accentuate those outer edges with an extra dose of mascara. It will make you look almond-eyed and mysterious. Thin, short or scraggly lashes can be made to look as glamorous as anything by padding them before applying the mascara. This is done by anointing them with a bit of cream, then applying a little powder over the cream and THEN mascara. But take our advice and confine this practice to the evening hours only. Seen in the light of day, they lose their lure completely.

Colorful Wedding Saturday Afternoon

Mills-Morgan United

The wedding of Miss Sarah Dayton Morgan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gifford Morgan of this village, and Allen Deane Mills, son of Mr. and Mrs. Buell P. Mills of Rochester, took place Saturday afternoon at 4:30 o'clock at St. Luke's Episcopal Church. The Rev. L. B. Henry performed the ceremony.

The Christmas season provided the decorations for the church where Christmas greens were used to a great extent.

The wedding music was played by Mrs. Wyatt Hull, organist of the church.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of silver lame. It was made with long sleeves and a V neck, and with it she wore a veil of point d'esprit with duchess lace border. Her bouquet consisted of gardenias, softened with a few sprays of lilies of the valley and white bouvardia. The bouquet was made in a loop which extended in a graceful garland effect half way to the hem of her gown.

Mrs. F. Fletcher Carlock and Mrs. Joseph Roby Dorrance, sisters of the bride, were her attendants. They both wore shirtdress gowns of old gold lame made with high necks and with skirts of floor length with short trains. Their turbans were of the same material.

Sherwood W. Smith was the best man. The ushers were Alexander Beach, Clarence Lunt, Hiram Sibley, Schuyler Wells, Jr., Frederick Hoening, R. Addison Taylor, Jr., and Frederick Allen of Rochester.

Following the ceremony, Mrs. Frederick Arnold Manning, aunt of the bride, greeted the guests at her home in Main street, Mr. and Mrs. Morgan receiving with her.

The stately old home, formerly the family homestead, was beautifully decorated with palms, ferns and cut flowers, in charming contrast to the Christmas greens and winter bouquets at the church; lilies, pink roses and blue iris were the flowers used on one side of the house, and on the other yellow roses predominated.

The bridal table, seating 23, was a striking picture with branching silver candelabra and tall white and gold vases filled with yellow roses and feathery white flowers alternating with small white bouquets of the same flowers.

After a honeymoon trip to Bermuda, Mr. and Mrs. Mills will be at home at 272 Milburn street, Rochester.

Mrs. Mills is a graduate of Miss Masters' School and of Dobbs Ferry. Mr. Mills is a graduate of Princeton University.

Mrs. Sparks, the bride's mother, wore peacock blue crepe, and Mrs. McCormick wore black crepe.

Wallace Sparks, brother of the bride, was the best man.
